Big Promises: The Promise of Providence

The oldest Baptist congregation in America, founded in 1638, still meets today in Providence, Rhode Island. Providence was founded by a Puritan theologian named Roger Williams, who, after advocating for the separation of church and state, was exiled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1636. The new community he founded was named Providence to recognize God's gracious direction in leading them there.

Providence is not a biblical word but has evolved into an idea that refers to God's rule over the affairs of His creation. It is akin to the biblical idea of God's sovereignty—God's righteous rule over the affairs of men. For example, God "changes the times and the seasons; He removes kings and raises up kings" (Daniel 2:21). And, in Christ, "all things hold together" (Colossians 1:17, NASB). Such an idea motivated Paul to write Romans 8:28, giving us confidence that God uses everything in our life for good.

How many times a day do we say or think, “I’m going to...”? When we say or think in declarative terms, it calls to mind the old joke, “If you want to make God laugh, just tell Him your plans.” That’s an overstatement, of course; God doesn’t laugh at His children, even when He can see the error of our ways. Instead, the saying suggests that we ought to remember a biblical truth: “A man’s heart plans his way, but the Lord directs his steps” (Proverbs 16:9). Whether we remember every time to say it or think it, all our plans should be predicated by, “If the Lord wills.”

That was the apostle James' advice in a parable he wrote to his readers (James 4:13-17). He wrote about people who planned to go to a city, start a business, and make money. James suggested, "Not so fast." It is wiser to submit our plans to God and ask for His blessing and guidance since He has already planned our steps (Psalm 139:13-16).

Because God is good and sovereign, we can trust Him to work out His divine plans and purposes for creation—including for us personally. Today, if you say or think, “I’m going to...,” remember to leave room for God in your planning. We plan, but He directs.

Trust In Him

“O my God, I trust in You; let me not be ashamed; let not my enemies triumph over me.” Psalm 25:2

January is the month of new beginnings. Instead of (or in addition to) making resolutions for the new year, consider the challenges, obstacles, or opportunities you foresee that could arise in the next twelve months. It might be a financial challenge, a job relocation, a family situation, addressing a health issue, or some other “opportunity”.

January is a good time to make this resolution: I am going to begin today to lay these challenges before the Lord and resolve to trust Him to help me meet them. We could adjust David's words in Psalm 25 to read, "Let not my challenges triumph over me". Our challenges may not be enemy soldiers coming at us with swords and spears, but they can seem life-threatening, nonetheless. We can also echo David's words, "Let me not be ashamed". What would cause us to be ashamed? Being overcome and consumed by our "enemies".

Think about the months ahead – what do you see on the horizon? Bring those matters before the Lord and resolve to trust in him. Dr. David Jeremiah
